GOLD AND SILVER WATCHES,
The Largest and Best Assortment in the Colony.
Just Landed, ex Phœnician and Eliza Caroline.

THE Advertiser would particularly recommend the attention of the public to the above Extensive Assortment, and more particularly those who are in want of a Really Good Timekeeper, for never has he had an opportunity of doing so with greater confidence than at present, the whole of the watches received by the above vessels having been carefully examined and regulated in positions before leaving the manufacturer's hands; nothing more is therefore necessary to insure their proper performance, than merely winding of them up.

Every watch sold at this establishment is warranted for two years, and a written guarantee given, should the watch require fresh oil, or other attention within the period of warrantry it will be done free of charge; after that time, it will be cleaned and adjusted on the payment of 3s. 6d. if of the patent lever construction, or 4s. if of the horizontal; and no further charge will be made for attention during the then succeeding two years.

The expense of repairing a watch which has been accidentally broken, (or of one by another maker), may be known by enquiry at the time of its being left; the skill with which a watch is repaired and adjusted is of almost as much importance as its quality: the best watch, cleaned by an unskilful workman, will not go well. Possibly it may be no exaggeration to say, that more watches are spoiled by being placed in the hands of inexperienced workmen than are worn out by the public, for the injury which a bad workman does is often of a kind that can never after be satisfactorily rectified.

THE SCREW FOR STEAMERS.—In his examination before Lord Jocelyn's steam navigation committee, Captain Claxton, whose connexion with the construction and sailing performances of the Great Western and Great Britain screw steamer has gained for him a deservedly earned reputation, gave evidence in favour of iron steamers and of the screw, which he avers must, ere many years elapse, be applied universally as the motive power of sea-going vessels. To iron-built vessels Captain Claxton gives a decided preference, the advantages which he ascribes to them being durability, inexpensiveness in repairs, greater capacity, in proportion to tonnage, than wooden vessels for cargo, healthiness, and swift sailing. As regards durability, he described the state of the Great Britain when lying for many months exposed to a series of heavy gales in Dundrum Bay. It was also mentioned, that, although the quantity of cockles accumulated on the bottom of the Great Britain since lying in still water at Liverpool was so large as to sell for £5 10s. in the market, no ill effects were apparent when they were scraped off.

"Sworn to no Master, of no Sect am I."

MINISTERIAL TERGIVERSATION—AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

SURPRISED and indignant as the colonists were on learning that Earl GREY had ventured to intimate to the House of Lords, even after he had received official advices of the decision of the Legislative Council in October last, that he still considered himself at liberty to send convicts to our northern districts, in the event of that locality being erected into a separate colony, we confess, for our own part, we had some lingering hope that more mature reflection might lead his lordship to a different conclusion. It was not improbable, we surmised, that his lordship spoke under the impulse of disappointment and chagrin, and that intentions thus formed in the heat of the moment would subsequently be relinquished as unjust and untenable.

The despatch of the 10th of April last, published in this journal on Friday, puts all such conjectures to an end. Here we have it in black and white, under the noble lord's own hand, that what he was not ashamed to say he will not be ashamed to do. The threat which it was hoped might have been the offshoot of a transient excitement, proves to have been the result of settled determination. But for this threat, we should have hailed the despatch with gratitude and delight, for it announces the glad tidings that "HER MAJESTY will be advised at an early opportunity to revoke the existing Order in Council, so far as it relates to New South Wales." The announcement, however, loses all its grace, and nearly all its value, by reason of the reservations with which it is coupled. We are given to understand that the pen which erases the old Order can with equal facility indite a new one. The mouth which blows cold to-day can blow hot to-morrow. Most reluctantly, and in terms the most measured, does the Despatch admit that the present Address from the Legislative Council to HER MAJESTY may be considered as A FINAL EXPRESSION of the public opinion of that body, "as it has been hitherto constituted."

Now, compare this admission, reluctant as it is, with the assurance given in the Despatch of the 19th of November, 1849; namely, that it was not intended that any more convicts should be sent to ANY PART of New South Wales; but that it would, nevertheless, seem inconvenient to go so far as actually to revoke the Order in Council, UNTIL the Legislature's deliberately adopting, as its FINAL CONCLUSION, a determination that no more convicts ought, under any conditions, to be sent to ANY PART of the colony.

Well, the Minister admits, as we have just seen, that the Address before him may be considered as expressing such final conclusion. What then? Why, the promise in the one Despatch and the admission in the other clearly leave him no choice, as an honest man, but to revoke the Order forthwith, the revocation applying to EVERY PART of New South Wales—of course, to every part of New South Wales as New South Wales existed at the time the pledge was given.

But mark how the noble lord shuffles and evades. He does so in two ways. He intimates, in the first place, that if, after the separation of Victoria, the Legislature of the "NEW" colony of New South Wales should think fit to repudiate the decision of the OLD colony of New South Wales, another Order in Council should be substituted for the one revoked! In other words, convicts should in that case be sent hither, in defiance of the promise of 1849, and in defiance of the recognised decision of 1850. And by way of colouring for this disreputable tampering with good faith, a novel distinction is started between New South Wales the old, and New South Wales the new!

In the next place, his Lordship intimates, that, in the event of our new Council abiding by the decision of the old one, and of the inhabitants of the northern district applying for the further division of the colony authorised by the Act of Parliament, then an Order of Council will be issued, declaring Moreton Bay to be a place to which British criminals may be transported.

Such are the facts which complete, so far as deliberate determination goes, that shameful breach of covenant which was first adumbrated in Earl GREY's speech to the Lords.

It is to be deplored, not only for its own sake, as an act which no honest man can contemplate without a blush, but for the sake of its baneful effects on the political temper of our community. His Excellency Sir CHARLES A. FITZ ROY well expresses this view of the subject in his despatch to the COLONIAL MINISTER, dated the 8th October, 1850.

I can have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that as the Legislative Council have, after mature deliberation, come to the conclusion, that the existing feeling of the majority of the colonists is adverse to the continuance of transportation, it is extremely desirable that the Order in Council should be at once revoked; as, until this step is taken, the social and political tranquillity of the colony will be liable to be disturbed by designing and disaffected persons, whose object, under the pretext of agitating the question of transportation, is to instil sentiments of disloyalty into the minds of the lower orders of the community, and to render them discontented with the Government of the mother country.

Undoubtedly these prolonged tergiversations on the part of Ministers have been made the most of by the designing and disaffected persons to whom HIS EXCELLENCY alludes. And one of the most lamentable results has been, that as on the convict question the great bulk of the peaceable and loyal members of our community happened to concur in opinion with the turbulent and disaffected, the two classes, on most other questions wide as the poles asunder, have been brought into friendly fellowship and harmonious cooperation. Hereby the former have unwittingly seemed to countenance the democratic and revolutionary doctrines of the latter; while the latter have acquired a boldness and an audacity which they had never exhibited before. Thus has HER MAJESTY'S Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies been sprinkling gunpowder on the smouldering fires of Australian disaffection! Had an opposite policy been pursued at Downing-street, we firmly believe that, in spite of all the efforts of traitorous demagogues to fan them into a blaze, these fires would have died out of their own accord. Whatever democratic agitation, whatever impatience of British rule, may henceforth sully the fair name and disturb the tranquillity of the Australian colonies—on the head of my Lord GREY will a large measure of the responsibility rest.

CEYLON AFFAIRS.

IT will be remembered that considerable excitement was caused in London in consequence of Captain Watson denying before a Committee of the House of Commons, his signature to certain proclamations threatening death to persons concealing the property of some of the Ceylonese rebels. Notwithstanding this denial, many persons believed that Captain Watson, from imperfect acquaintance with the Cingalese language, had been induced by some of the native subordinate officers to sign these documents, without knowing their contents, and the result was that he was ordered to be tried before a Court Martial for giving false evidence. The official report of the Court Martial is now before us, and as the matter attracted considerable attention, we give the proceedings in full. It will be seen that Captain Watson was acquitted, and that the Court expressed its opinion that the signatures were forgeries.

COURT-MARTIAL ON CAPTAIN WATSON.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head Quarters, Colombo, May 13, 1851.

At a General Court Martial held at Colombo, pursuant to instructions from his Grace the Duke of Wellington, dated Horse Guards, 19th December, 1850,—on the 8th ultimo, and continued by adjournment to the 10th instant, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Brown of the Royal Engineers is President and Lieutenant-Colonel Wilson, of the Royal Artillery, Officiating-Judge-Advocate—Captain Albert Watson, of the Ceylon Rifle Regiment, was arraigned on the undermentioned charges, viz: —

For behaving in a scandalous infamous, manner unbecoming an officer and a gentleman in the following instances, viz.:—

Watson, Captain Commanding," and which document in the English language is in substance as follows, viz.: —

Watson falsely answered that the said signature was not written by him, and that the same was a forgery, or words to that effect; whereas in truth and in fact, the said signature to the said last mentioned document was written by him, the said Captain A. Watson, as he then and there well knew.

Captain Commanding, Matelle.

And when questioned by the said Committee whether the said signature to the said last-mentioned document so produced in evidence and shown to him was written by him, the said Captain A. Watson falsely answered that the said signature was not written by him, and that the same was a forgery, or words to that effect, whereas in truth and in fact the said signature to the said last-mentioned document was written by him the said Captain A. Watson, as he then and there well knew.

Fourth Instance—

For having on the 11th February, 1850, at Westminster, when examined before the Select Committee of the House of Commons touching a certain other document then and there produced in evidence, and shown to him written in English and in Cingalese—the signature to which last-mentioned document is written in English, that is to say, "A. A. WATSON,
Captain Commanding, Matelle.

Matelle Fort, 9th August, 1848.

And when questioned by the said Committee whether the said signature to the said last-mentioned document so produced in evidence and shown to him was written by him, the said Captain A. Watson falsely answered that the said signature was not written by him, and that the same was a forgery, or words to that effect, whereas in truth and in fact the said signature to the said last-mentioned document was written by him the said Captain A. Watson, as he then and there well knew—

FINDING.

The Court having maturely weighed and considered the evidence in support of the charge against the prisoner, Captain A. Watson, Ceylon Rifle Regiment, and what he has said in his defence, and the evidence adduced in support of it, is of opinion that the prisoner, Captain A. Watson, Ceylon Rifle Regiment, is not guilty of the 1st instance of the charge preferred against him—that he is not guilty of the 2nd instance of the charge preferred against him—that he is not guilty of the 3rd instance of the charge preferred against him—that he is not guilty of the 4th instance of the charge preferred against him—and do most fully and most honourably acquit him, the said Captain A. Watson, Ceylon Rifle Regiment, of the said charge and the four instances contained in it;—the Court are further of opinion that the signatures attached to the four Proclamations before the Court are not genuine, but are mere forgeries as asserted by him the said Captain A. Watson, Ceylon Rifle Regiment, before the said Committee of the House of Commons, at Westminster, on the 14th of July, 1850, and that the statements then and there made by him the said Captain A. Watson, Ceylon Rifle Regiment, before the said Committee with regard to the said signatures were true, and not false.

Acting Deputy Adjutant-General.

THE LYRIC DRAMA.—Notwithstanding the secession from the operatic corps of the Victoria Theatre of some of its leading members, to whom the "dark gold mines" of the poet have presented greater temptations than the realms of song, the lyric drama has done anything but languish in their absence; and to those lovers of their art who have resisted the attractions of Ophir and the Turon the patronage of the Sydney dilettanti ought in this season of the half-yearly benefits, to be cordially extended. To the able direction of Mr. Gibbs must be ascribed much of the success which has attended the production here of some of the choicest novelties of the modern school of music, and we have much pleasure in directing attention to the programme of the entertainments that he has selected for his benefit, and which takes place this evening. Some of the most popular morceaux from the works of Rossini, Donizetti, Wallace, Macfarren, &c., are included in the attractive bill of fare; and, in addition to the aid of Miss Sara Flower, and the corps vocale, the instrumental arrangements will receive the valuable augmentation of the fine band of H.M. 11th Regiment.

MORETON BAY PEARLS.—With reference to a paragraph under this head, extracted from the Sydney Morning Herald in our Monday's Supplement, we have been favoured by Mr. Henry Watson, of this town, with the perusal of a letter and bill of sale, which places the matter in a very different light from that shown by the paragraph in question. It appears that the pearls alluded to were forwarded to Sydney by Mr. Watson, for sale to Mr. Hale, who purchased them for £1. A gentleman from the Herald Office chancing to look at them at Mr. Hale's shop, Mr. Hale informed him that if they had been of better colour he would have given from four to five pounds for them. It seems that the gentleman alluded to must have understood Mr. Hale to say "from £45," and hence arose the mistake of valuing them at about £50—rather an important error in figures. We are informed, however, on good authority, that if the pearls were of good colour they would be worth £20 an ounce.—Moreton Bay Courier. [The error was a typographical one, not noticed by us until our attention was called thereto by our Moreton Bay contemporary. We may add, that some of the pearls have been set in rings and brocches for presents to friends in England.]

BUSHCRAFT.

WANT of water is the evil which he who traverses the bush has most to fear. In some parts of the country, rivulets and water-holes are only to be met with at remote distances from each other: in the scrubby lands intersected by deep gullies, or ravines—such lands as the sportsman would naturally most resort to—a small brook or a piece of swampy ground will usually be found at the lowest point of each gully. Towards night-fall such places may be traced out by the croaking of the frogs. During the day the approach to a river or to any considerable sheet of water may be known by observing the flight of the cormorants and other aquatic birds. But in the wilds, the chances of having to camp without water are so great, that the sponge is, as we have before mentioned, a part of the sportsman's equipment that ought never to be forgotten.

Sportsmen and travellers are often lost almost beyond redemption by trying to extricate themselves from their difficulties after darkness has fairly set in upon them. By so doing they are almost certain to get deeper into the wilds, and to lose all the traces by which they might hope to return as they came. The best and the safest course when a wayfarer in the bush finds that night will certainly overtake him before he can retrace his steps or complete his journey onward, is for him to stop for the night at the first eligible spot that presents itself. The vicinity of water is the most important thing. Where water is found, a sheltered spot can almost invariably be pitched upon close at hand, and a few bushes rapidly torn down and interlaced to windward of the place where the wayfarer intends to rest, will, in an Australian climate, answer every purpose unless the weather be unpropitious. Fern, small branches, or bushes, will make an excellent couch if the ground be damp; and indeed under any circumstances it is advisable to strew a few of these on the spot selected as a sleeping-place.

A party of three or four may "camp out" with much greater comfort than a single individual. Consequently, when sportsmen plunge into the wilds in search of game they should go in such parties, or at all events in couples. If they set out with the determination of passing a night or two in the bush, each person should carry a blanket or rug. One should also carry a small vessel to make tea with, and another a light hatchet or tomahawk. By the aid of the latter a sufficient quantity of bushes for shelter and repose may speedily be cut down. If a natural cover of trees and shrubs presents itself so much the better, and in most cases a place may readily be found where, with but little labour, a well sheltered camp may be formed. At a short distance, and in the direction towards which the feet of the sleepers will be pointed when they retire to rest, the fire should be made, care being taken to remove from its vicinity all dry grass, leaves, or twigs, which might ignite and carry the flame into the surrounding bush. If damp weather should set in and a perfectly sheltered spot cannot be found to camp in, one or more blankets, according to the number of the party, should be strained in the form of a roof, while bushes are piled up on either side for walls, sufficiently high to allow of the party sitting upright within. With such precautions, with a good fire, and with good bush fare, the sportsman may defy the weather.

There are still many places within a day's journey of the metropolis to which sporting parties might resort at the proper season with much profit and amusement, although the larger game has for the most part been driven off to regions farther removed. The best mode of proceeding is this. The party should start for their proposed hunting ground at such an hour as to arrive there in the afternoon. A camping place should then be selected, and a shelter constructed. Here the party may rest for the night, and here also they may muster on the following day for the purposes of refreshment, and for comparing their good or ill fortune as hunters. For this reason the camp should be in a central position, and on a slight elevation; near it a fire should be kept up. The smoke, during the day, or after nightfall the fire itself, would serve as a guide to the spot, but each person should nevertheless take bearings carefully before quitting the camp. Three days, one in going to the ground, a second for actual sport, and a third for the return, may in fine weather be thus very pleasantly and healthfully spent.

In the far interior the traveller looks out for a station, and there are many indications by which the approach to one is at once made known to a practised eye. The excrement of cattle, the marks of the axe where wood has been cut for burning, or bark removed for hut-building; and, on a nearer approach, the barking of dogs, and the note of chanticleer, are among these indications.

The way from one place to another in the interior is often pointed out by lines of marked trees only. In such a case the utmost vigilance is necessary, for the line is easily lost, and difficult to find again; and it is usually across a heavy and wild country that those lines are carried. Many such lines are formed for the sake of shortening the distance between two points between which there is a practicable and well beaten but more circuitous road. In such cases the traveller who is not versed in bushcraft will usually find it most to his advantage to keep on the highway.

Equestrians should always carry hobbles for their horses. To hobble the horses while their riders bivouac in the bush is generally better than tethering them, especially in scrubby lands, and if both horses and cattle have been accustomed to carry bells, so that they may be traced by the sound, it will be all the better, for much time is often lost in the morning in hunting up the animals before making a start.

When a party of sportsmen, instead of forming a particular camp as a resting-place during the whole time of their excursion, shall deem it better to proceed separately towards a more distant place of rendezvous, the position and bearings of this place should be distinctly understood, and if it is in the bush he who arrives there first should at once make a fire to guide the rest.

As a general rule it will be found well to secure, if practicable, the presence and assistance of an aboriginal native with all such parties. The aid of one or more of these can in most cases be obtained for a trifling consideration; and their sagacity in finding game, in searching out water, or in tracking any of the party who may happen to miss his way, renders them well worthy of their hire. No intoxicating drink, however, should be given to them, and it is better, indeed, that nothing of this kind should form a part of the equipment.

THE MAITLAND GOLD REWARD COMMITTEE.—At a meeting of this Committee held on Monday last at the Fitz Roy Hotel, Maitland, several letters from parties engaged in "prospecting" were taken into consideration. The most satisfactory communication was from Mr. W. F. Buchanan, dated from Rumbanda, New England, 24th September. The writer states, that himself and Mr. J. Lucas having pursued their search (as intimated in the Committee's report of the 18th ultimo,) have found the existence of gold for upwards of twenty miles along the M'Donald River, on Surveyor's Creek, the Cangi Creek; and also on the Rocky River, which empties itself into the Bundarra River, about twenty miles from Armidale. The writer adds, that Mr. Andrew Buchanan has also found gold in Carlisle's Creek. His opinion is, that, by amalgamation, large quantities of gold may be obtained in these localities. Its general existence in the beds of the rivers and creeks, and the constant and never failing supply of water, present facilities of no ordinary character. Messrs. Caying and Eckford, Mr. Joseph Druitt, and Mr. T. S. Hall, had also addressed letters to the Committee; but the information contained in each was not considered of sufficient importance to be recorded on the minutes of the Committee. A resolution expressive of satisfaction at the receipt of Mr. Buchanan's letter, and directing it to be recorded, was passed unanimously; and instructions were given to the Secretary to request further particulars from the other writers. The Committee then adjourned until the 6th of October (this day).

THE PORT PHILLIP GOLD FIELDS.—The population of Geelong has received an accession of five hundred souls during the last seven days; but it has suffered an abstraction of at least three times that number. Persons arriving generally stay only one night, starting for the diggings by daylight next morning. It is difficult to form an estimate of the fluctuations, but we think we are not far wrong in stating that about 2500 have left Geelong during the last three weeks. They are not all bound for Ballarat. The bands disperse in the hope of finding still richer fields. One party we know started with the determination of diverging westward when half-way up. We are still less capable of estimating the number of adventurers converging towards Buninyong from the other points of the compass. We are sure, however, to be under the mark, in taking them as equal in number to those from this town. If so, there will in a very few days be a population of at least five thousand within ten miles of Buninyong, and that number will in all probability be doubled in another fortnight. It would be idle to speculate further. Some imagine that when the waters dry up the diggers will have to return. Others suppose, with equal probability, that the decrease of the streams will lay bare still richer deposits. We would impress upon all gold seekers that the adventure they are engaged upon is an exceedingly precarious one. Those who start henceforward must go prospecting, and even if they are successful, it may be at the loss of much valuable time.—Geelong Advertiser, September 27.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE BRITISH MERCANTILE NAVY.—We have received a copy of a Lecture on this subject, which was delivered some months ago by Mr. James Ballingall, in the Mechanics' Institution, Melbourne. Mr. Ballingall has long been known to the Australian colonists as a zealous and untiring labourer in the field of mercantile and marine reform, and we find with regret that the hopes which he had formed of obtaining some substantial acknowledgment on the part of Her Majesty's Government have been disappointed. Since the year 1838 he has constantly invited public attention (through the medium of both the Sydney and Port Phillip press) to the imperative necessity of having "safe merchant ships safely conducted;" and his many published statements on the subject have received much attention both here and at home. It is scarcely necessary to observe that it is at home that his claims must be considered, and as he is still using his best exertions through the press and otherwise to serve the great cause of improvement in the mercantile navy, he has our best wishes for his ultimate success in appealing to the consideration of the home authorities.

LONDON THE CENTRAL POINT OF THE WORLD.—The London journals are commenting in variously expressed terms, and with no small degree of laudable pride, on the circumstance of that city having been rendered by the Grand Exhibition, the metropolis of the world. Several of them have also noticed a fact well known to geologists, although overlooked by geographers, that the geographical position of London is peculiarly adapted for the rendezvous of all nations, since it actually occupies, as nearly as the irregular figure of the dry land of the globe will admit, the centre point of the surface of the earth. This is easily demonstrable by means of a terrestrial globe. If the globe be placed so that London shall appear in the zenith, a larger portion of land will be shown above the wooden horizon than by any other arrangement. Reversing it, and bringing the antipodes of the British metropolis to the zenith, the greatest extent of water will be found. In Lyell's Geology are given two maps illustrative of this remarkable fact, in which London and its antipodes respectively occupy the centres of the two hemispheres of the globe, and by which the arrangement of land and water is clearly seen.

FLOUR MARKET.—Messrs. Mort and Brown sold by public auction, on Saturday, 20 tons fine flour, at £22 10s. and £22 per ton, the residue of the parcel being withdrawn.

STEALING FROM THE PERSON.—Between 10 and 11 o'clock, on Friday evening, Sergeant Garvin of the Sydney Police, apprehended William Delmore for stealing from George Thorpe the sum of 5s., and confined the latter for being drunk. Thorpe is a private of the 11th Regiment, and Delmore a few weeks since obtained his discharge from the Regiment. The two had been drinking together, and become somewhat "down by the head," Thorpe being the more intoxicated of the two. A purse, claimed by Thorpe as his property, and about 3s. 6d., was found on the prisoner. Delmore was, on Saturday, committed to take his trial for stealing, and Thorpe remanded to the custody of the military authorities on the charge of drunkenness.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.—On Saturday, an inquest was held before the Coroner, at the Australian Inn, Parramatta-street, on view of the body of Edward Conroy, then lying dead at the back of the said street. The deceased was engineer at Mr. Pemell's steam-mills, Parramatta-street. Mr. W. Ashworth, who resides opposite to the mills, stated that on Friday evening, about six o'clock, deceased was sitting in his (Mr. A.'s) parlour, when deceased's son came running in, saying that the mill was stopping. Deceased immediately proceeded to see what was the matter, and his son having been despatched after him to see whether he had put the mill to rights, returned and told his mother that his father was dead. Witness and others ran over to the mill and found deceased fast in the fly-wheel. He was taken out, and Dr. Cuthill was sent for, but deceased was dead. The witness stated that deceased was not sober, but still able to take care of himself. No one was in the mill but deceased when witness and the others ran over. John Brown, miller, at Mr. Pemell's mills, stated, that on Friday evening, he perceived that the mill had stopped, and accordingly went round to ascertain the cause. He found the fires nearly out, and put some wood in the furnace, whilst doing which deceased came up; he seemed intoxicated, but could walk about; he told witness to go into the mill, and he would start the engine immediately; witness complied, and went to the stones; the engine gave one half turn and then stopped; witness again went round to see what was the matter, when he found the deceased's son there, who, on looking into the engine-room, came back shrieking out that his father was killed; witness at once gave the alarm, and Mr. Pemell and Dr. Cuthill were sent for; but the unfortunate man was dead; no one saw the occurrence that witness was aware of, nor could it be ascertained how deceased got entangled in the wheel. Mr. Surgeon Cuthill stated, that he was called upon to see the body of the deceased, when the alarm was given on Friday evening. He examined the body, which was very much bruised. The chief injuries were on the chest, many of the ribs being broken, by which great injury must have been done to the contents of the thorax. These injuries alone would have been sufficient to cause death. The Coroner having charged the jury, they returned a verdict of "Died from injuries accidentally received."—A second inquest was held on Saturday evening, by the Coroner, at the Three Tuns Tavern, Elizabeth-street, on view of the body of William Cheeseman, then lying dead in the Sydney Infirmary. Joseph Saxby, residing at Botany, stated, that he knew the deceased; on Wednesday night last, shortly before 9 o'clock, he was going home, when he found deceased lying on the ground opposite the Waterloo Dam. His horse and cart were in a waterhole two or three hundred yards on the Sydney side, away from the body. His head was in a pool of blood, and he was unable to move or speak. Witness gave the alarm, and had him conveyed to the Sydney Infirmary. Witness carefully examined the road on both sides the next morning, but could see no signs of struggling. Mrs. Dickin, a midwife, residing at Chippendale, stated, that on Wednesday last the deceased came for her to attend his wife in her accouchement. She did so, and afterwards deceased drove her back to Chippendale. He was perfectly sober when he left her to return home. Dr. Nathan stated that deceased was received into the Sydney Infirmary about 10 o'clock P.M., on the 1st instant. He was insensible and cold, breathing laboriously. His face was covered with blood, and he (Dr. Nathan) was informed of the state in which he had been found on the road by the first witness. No fracture could be discovered, nor was there any bruise or external mark of injury, except a slight bruise on the upper part of the left cheek-bone. His head having been shaved, a small point of contusion was found behind the right ear. He rallied somewhat the next day, but stated that he was quite deaf and unable to reply to his (Dr. Nathan's) questions. Vomiting dark blood afterwards took place, and he died on Friday morning. Dr. Nathan added that he had since made a post mortem examination, and found extravasation of blood under the temporal facia, on both sides, with extensive fracture at the lower part of the right side of the skull, extending through its base to the left side, and including every bone of the skull. In his (Dr. Nathan's) opinion, such an injury might have been occasioned by a heavy body, such as a cart, passing over the head; and that the slight bruise on the right cheek might have been occasioned by contact with the ground. Those injuries were the cause of death. The Jury returned a verdict of "died from injuries accidentally received." The deceased was an extremely temperate man, and has left a widow and five children; the youngest having been born (as mentioned above) within two hours of the fatal accident.

LUNACY. — Bridget Riley was on Friday afternoon given into the custody of the police, by one or two of her neighbours, for protection, being of unsound mind, and they were apprehensive of injury being inflicted by the unfortunate woman, either on herself or others, unless placed under restraint. Mr. Rutter, surgeon of the police force, having examined the woman, deposed that she was unquestionably of unsound mind; that whilst he was watching her in the watchhouse, she manifested a disposition to violence, and he considered it necessary that she should be placed under proper treatment and control, as well for her own protection as for that of others. The police magistrate ordered, in default of sureties for her good behaviour, she be imprisoned for one month—not for punishment, but, being a poor person, that she may have the benefit of that proper medical treatment which she would receive at Darlinghurst. The poor woman has three children of tender age—her husband and elder sons being at California; she lives in a house belonging to her husband, and it is said has a small sum of money for present necessities. One or two of her neighbours were present in Court, and very humanely undertook to look after the children for the present. It is said that the poor woman's aberration has been caused by apprehensions for her husband's welfare, from whom she has not heard for some time.

FLOUR.—We are requested to call attention to the extensive sale of flour, &c., ex Ariadne, from Valparaiso, at the rooms of Messrs. Mort and Brown, this day, at 12 o'clock.—Communicated.

SALE OF VESSELS.—The schooners Ellen and Nut Browne Mayde, also, the wreck of the schooner Beaver, will be sold at auction, by Mr. George A. Lloyd, at the City Mart, this day, at 12 o'clock.—Communicated.

PARRAMATTA.

RETURN DIGGERS.—For several days during the last week the number of men returning from the gold fields appears to be about equal to those proceeding thither. We know for a fact, that many who intend to visit the auriferous region have made up their minds to remain till after the oat and wheat crops are secured; and some of the small farmers are returning to attend to the harvest. In conversation with some of the persons who came hither from Adelaide, and who are returning, they state that they were able to make a comfortable livelihood at that place, and therefore have resolved to return, seeing that their luck at the Turon has not been so encouraging as Blakefield's, Kerr's, Smith's, the Halls', and others.

FATAL EFFECTS OF DRUNKENNESS. — An inquest was held at the dwelling-house of Mrs. Ellen Pearce, at Lane Cove, before Mr. C. B. Lyons, Coroner for the District, on view of the remains of Francis Jackson, a labouring man. It appears from the evidence of the witnesses that deceased left his place of residence and went to a place called the "District," where there are twenty-five or thirty houses, many of them notorious for sly-grog selling; deceased got drunk, and on Friday turned towards home, but on his way procured a torch, with which he set himself on fire; he ran through the bush, setting the grass, leaves, &c., on fire; there were evident signs of his having rolled himself on the ground; fragments of his half consumed apparel were found—brace buttons, trousers buttons, as they had fallen off. All his clothes were burnt from his body except the boots and leather girdle. The body was found in the bush three days afterwards perfectly roasted. The Jury returned a verdict of accidental death by burning.

ACCIDENT AT HOMEBUSH RACES. — The celebrated colonial jockey known as "Old Dunn" had just dressed and prepared to mount, after going to the scales for the purpose of weighing and taking his saddle and bridle, he passed through the crowd, when coming near the heels of a horse he received a kick on the shin-bone, which produced a compound fracture. Dunn was just about to ride Mr. Hillas' horse Muleyson. The sporting gentlemen present subscribed a good sum for the poor fellow, and he was conveyed to the Parramatta District Hospital, where he is now getting on favourably.

PROSPECT.—A most distressing accident occurred at this place a few days ago. Mr. William Lawson, who was just in a convalescent state from a late illness, fancied that he should enjoy a drive in the park, and ordered a favourite horse to be put in the gig; he had not gone far when the animal became restive, and threw Mr. Lawson out of the gig, which turned upon him; fortunately the horse managed to extricate himself from the harness, and made off. The whole affair was witnessed by some of the family from the parlour window, and Dr. Gamack was immediately sent for, who discovered that the wrist was dislocated, the ankle seriously injured, and several contusions about the head and body, accompanied with insensibility. There is every hope of a speedy recovery.

WATER WORKS.—The committee appointed by the government for carrying out the water works, met in the District Council Chamber, on Thursday evening last, Dr. Hill in the chair. The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which showed that the committee had met in a body at Hunt's Creek, the spot where the dam is to be erected, and had pointed out the lines and abutments of the dam. Mr. Pye inquired whether the present meeting intended to pay the expenses incurred by the People's Committee for surveyors, &c. Mr. Byrnes replied that no demand from the People's Committee had been presented to them. Dr. Hill was of opinion that such demands should remain in abeyance till the work was finished, when they would see if there were any funds. Mr. John Stewart, the contractor, attended for the purpose of eliciting further explanations in reference to the plans and specifications, and informed the committee that a large quantity of stone was in readiness. It was understood by the meeting that the masons should immediately commence in laying the foundation.

THE SYDNEY ROAD.—This great thoroughfare may fairly be pronounced to be in a very creditable condition; but we most confidently assert that unless something more than the scanty funds at present disposable is granted, that we shall soon hear of a crash, and other serious inconveniences, about the locality of Haslem's creek and the bridge near the toll gate. It is surely bad policy to allow those bridges to give way before something is fixed upon in their place. For years they have been stated to be unsound, and for the last week or two large holes have appeared, but were very promptly repaired by our Road Trust. It is to be hoped that a grant extraordinary for bridges in the two spots alluded to will be placed upon the estimates by the next Council.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

(From our Correspondents.)

WINDSOR.

SEPTEMBER 26.—An inquest was this day held, before Joshua Dowe, Esq., the Coroner for the district, on the body of John Teale, who died on the morning of this day. From the evidence of the son of the deceased, it appeared that he had been in the habit of drinking to excess for the last ten or twelve years, and had latterly been indulging to a great extent. He was seized with an attack of delirium tremens on the 24th instant; but as he had had similar attacks frequently before, his family did not think it necessary to call in medical aid until an hour or two before he died. The jury brought in a verdict, that deceased, John Teale, died of delirium tremens, produced by the excessive use of ardent spirits.—Another inquest was held, this day, before the Coroner, at the Windsor Hotel, Bridge-street, on view of the body of James Brown, then lying dead. The deceased, who was but two and a-half years old, some three or four weeks since upset a kettle of boiling water over his legs, feet, and thighs, thereby seriously scalding himself. The wounds, however, all healed, except one on the left foot, which could not be cured, but ended in mortification, causing death. These facts having been deposed to, the Jury returned a verdict that deceased, James Brown, died from the effects of a scald which he received accidentally.

OPHIR.

OCTOBER 1.—The weather at Ophir during the past week has been extremely unseasonable (except for the diggers), the days being excessively warm, and the nights and mornings cold and frosty; and unless we have a change, with moisture, the hills which are now green will speedily be bare of grass. A good thunder shower would in this respect be of great benefit.

The man alluded to in my last as having been taken into custody for the robbery of Mr. Arkins' store, at the Wallaby Rocks, on the Summerhill Creek, was discharged on Monday last, there not being sufficient evidence to convict him. Indeed, the party who gave Mr. Arkins the information narrowly escaped being given in charge for perjury, and there is little doubt this fellow knew more of the transaction than, for his own sake, he would tell. Under all the circumstances the presiding magistrate, Mr. Commissioner Green, very properly ordered the informer to leave the creek, and if he insisted on remaining no doubt a recommendation would be made for the cancellation of his ticket, he being a holder of such indulgence.

The fall in the price of gold, given by purchasers on the ground, in Bathurst, and in Sydney, has caused, it is believed, within the past week, many miners to dispose only of such quantities as would enable them to procure supplies. I can speak for a fact, that several individuals, sooner than sell at present rates here (58s. per ounce) intend holding or making safe deposits of their gleanings until a reaction takes place. Certainly, the price at present offered on the ground is quite high enough for speculators, yclept gold purchasers. Now that such a fall has taken place, it is reasonable to expect that the Government will not allow quite so much as at present for gold in payment of licenses; in fact, it should be a little under the Sydney commercial value, or the price given at the various diggings. At the present government allowance it is rather singular that more licenses are not paid for with Australian gold.

Fresh faces, and new red and blue serge shirts and belts, are presented to us every day, arriving from all parts, with every kind of bush conveyance,—the most numerous, Shanks' pony. A party of four, including Drs. Cartwright and ——, came upon the grounds today, and intend to try the pick in lieu of the blood-letting lancet.

The success of some of the miners is certainly extraordinary, and those who have but poor luck should never despair. At the commencement of last month, a party of two endeavoured to evade the payment of the license fee, and one actually bolted from his claim; but the Commissioner was not to be slighted after that fashion, and therefore despatched a trooper after the bolter up the hill, who succeeded in bringing the young gentleman to the scratch—but very loth was he to pay. It was only this day these two young men—scarcely more than lads—brought their gatherings to the scales to be weighed, and to their surprize and, I may add, delight, they saw the gold carry down 38 oz.—worth about £120—making £60 each for the month, or about £2 6s. per diem. The success of these men had been very indifferent up to last month. In the quantity of gold above alluded to there was a very handsome nugget specimen, weighing upwards of 17 oz.

A great many licenses, I understand, have been paid for this day by parties located on claims situate between the Junction and the Big Waterhole, about half-a-mile below Newtown. Several individuals who had been taking a spell, in consequence of the water being too plentiful, intend once more to commence operations.

On Sunday last, Divine service was performed at the Junction by the Rev. Mr. Smyth, the Presbyterian clergyman, from Bathurst. Considering the small number on the creek, the attendance was very good, and, as the reverend gentleman remarked, highly gratifying. There were nearly one hundred persons present, and these assembled after an hour's notice. I was informed by the worthy clergyman that arrangements had been made for regular visits by ministers in connexion with the Kirk of Scotland. So far so good. It is rumoured that Archbishop Polding and Dr. Lang intend to pay us a visit shortly.

Flour, I am happy to state, is more than a trifle lower. It was offered upon the creek yesterday at 50s. the 100 lbs.

MUSWELLBROOK.

OCTOBER 1.—THE WEATHER, &c.—For some weeks past the weather has been very changeable here, some days hot, others cold and windy, with indications of rain; some nights sultry, others frosty. The wheat and barley look well, but rain is very much wanted for the gardens and pasture; shearing has commenced on most of the sheep stations in this district.

POLICE COURT.—HOUSEBREAKING.—John Kelly was this day (29th September) committed by the Bench to take his trial at the next Circuit Court, at Maitland, for housebreaking. It appeared from the evidence that Benjamin Cormo, who resides in a cottage on the Edinglassie Estate, about four miles from Muswellbrook, left his residence about two o'clock on Thursday last, and when he returned in the evening found that his dwelling had been forcibly entered by some person, who had stolen all his wearing apparel, the next morning Cormo went to Muswellbrook, and reported the robbery to Mr. Fox, the Chief Constable, who shortly afterwards ascertained where some of the stolen property had been sold the previous evening, a description of the man who sold the articles was given to the Chief Constable, and during the day Mr. Fox apprehended the prisoner Kelly (who is a stranger in this district) on suspicion, the clothing was produced in Court, and identified by Cormo, as the articles stolen from his dwelling, and the prisoner was identified as the man who sold them; he had nothing to say in his defence, and was fully committed for trial.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BOTANICAL LECTURES.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—I am glad to observe that it is the intention of the Director of the public Gardens to give lectures on Botany during the summer. Will you allow me to suggest, however, that the hour proposed (4 P.M.) is very objectionable. The lectures of the Apothecaries Society, in the Chelsea Gardens, and those annually delivered in the Jardin des Plantes, in Paris, take place at eight o'clock in the morning. The following extract from the Atlas, of May 10th, shows the practice in Edinburgh:—"The summer session of the University of Edinburgh having commenced, Professor Balfour opened his Botanical Class for the season on Thursday morning, at eight o'clock, in the new and elegant building just erected in the Botanical Gardens, Inverleithrow. This edifice has been raised at the expense of the Government, a grant of £1600 having been awarded for the purpose. It was richly festooned and decorated with flowers on the occasion. There were from 150 to 200 students present, besides a considerable number of gentlemen." In this climate I would suggest seven o'clock as the most fitting hour which would enable persons to attend them without interfering with the business of the day. If they are delivered as proposed, in the afternoon, I fear they will be merely looked upon as amusement for an afternoon's lounge.

AMICUS.

SYDNEY MECHANICS' SCHOOL OF ARTS.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—The following notice of motion, which will be submitted to the adjourned special meeting of the School of Arts, on Wednesday evening next, is of such importance to all interested in that institution, that it must be my apology for requesting a place for it in your columns.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

A MEMBER OF THE INSTITUTION.

NOTICE OF MOTION, BY MR. RICHARD GOWLAND.

"That the Committee of Management as at present constituted, under the 12th law, be dissolved forthwith, and the following gentlemen—A. A'Beckett, Esq., W. T. Cape, Esq.; Rev. David Blair; Messrs. Illidge, M'Culloch, Mountcastle, Day, Bradridge, Armstrong, Deniehy, Garton, Pennington, Phillips, Purser, Gowland—be appointed a Provisional Committee, (five of them to form a quorum) to revise the present laws of the institution, and to present them at an adjournment of this meeting for adoption; and that the abovenamed Provisional Committee shall have the management of the affairs of the institution until a new Committee of Management be appointed."

Also, to be moved by Mr. Richard Gowland:—"That Mr. I. M. Illidge be appointed provisional Treasurer, in the place of Mr. Cowlishaw, resigned, until a new Treasurer be elected."

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—My name having been unnecessarily introduced by persons in rodomontade speeches at the Illawarra or East Camden nomination, in reference to my signature to a certain petition of colonists in the year 1838, I think it desirable to state that although I fell into the error of appending my signature to such a petition, I wholly repudiate every or any sympathy with that clause that recommended the withholding the right of vote to the emancipist classes, &c. I signed, doubtless, for the good it contained in common with many others, and the monstrous wrong it was calculated to inflict, I confess, was an oversight on my part. I take men in the aggregate as brethren of one human family. I do not stop to enquire whence they came, nor do I inquisitorially seek into their genealogy. I extend the hand of fellowship to all alike—it is only a bad man that I decry.

As an instance of others having been entrapped into signatures, as well as myself, I am aware that the petition above referred to actually bears the signature of a son of an emancipist. Little I dare say, he suspected he was praying to be deprived, in his own person, of the right to vote!

The doctrine contained in this petition has long since exploded, and will never again disgrace the statutes of British Legislation. The march of mind in its onward direction hurls aside with indignation the slightest infringement of the people's rights, their proper inheritance and their perfect freedom.

I am, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

W. P. WILSHIRE.

Turon River, October 1.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—The Elections over, the first local question calling for discussion, is an appointment in the Supreme Court. Can any time be more opportune for originating a discussion as to the applicability of cheap country or district law to this colony. It is pretty clear that in filling up the vacancy occasioned by the death of the Prothonotary, neither the Government nor Judges of the Supreme Court contemplate a change, indeed if the colony be left to the tender mercies of the Judges in this particular, the day of legal reform here is far distant.

For more than half a century Ireland has had her County Courts both of Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction presided over by barristers (many of whom were there trained for the bench). Within the last ten years England demanded from her Parliament similar institutions—they were granted, and so well have they worked, the great anxiety now of the English public is to preserve them with even extended powers, but in this colony the movement is reversed, and the disposition is to perpetuate the expensive and concentrated system of the Supreme Court.

The subject of the administration of justice was in 1848 referred to a Commission in this colony. This commission recommended the continuance of the Supreme Court not only with its then but with an increased establishment. Could anything be more monstrous. The Supreme Court Staff, of a Chief Justice, two Puisne Judges, Master in Equity, Prothonotary, Insolvent Commissioner, and a number of clerks, was called into existence when the Civil and Criminal business of the colony was twice what it is now, and notwithstanding the decrease in the business, the establishment must not be reduced, except, perhaps, in the matter of a poor clerk, or such like. Nay, more, the establishment is to be increased. It is admitted by the Report of the Commissioners that great advantages would be derived from the adoption of the Irish system, and the only reason assigned for not recommending the adoption of that system is, that the colony is unable to bear the expense of that system and of the Supreme Court. Why not the Supreme Court give way to the improvement which the adoption of the Irish system would effect? What is there sacred about the Supreme Court to preserve it from immolation to the principles of reform. But no, the Commissioners will not impair if they do not improve the condition of the Supreme Court, and the colony must go without cheap local law until it is able to pay for it and the Supreme Court too. It is not remarkable that a Commission, composed of the Judges and a few leading lawyers, should so report. Law reform in England has been uniformly opposed by the Judges and the heads of the profession, no matter how Radical in politics; our lawyers, with few exceptions are Conservative, in legal abuses, for this simple reason, it is their pocket interest to be so. Is it not in this colony the interest of the Judges to preserve their Court and its dignity intact, of the few leading barristers in full practice, and no doubt aspiring to the ermine, to preserve the Bench in which they have a reversionary interest, and of the old established solicitors whose years unfit them for competition to preserve the present Sydney establishment. As long as the question is left in the hands of such Commissioners, we shall make no progress in law reform. It is, however, to be hoped that the extracts which from time to time have appeared in your paper on the subject of law reform in England will not be without their effect, but that they will call the attention of those qualified to advocate law reform, unblinded by prejudice to take up the subject, and that in the next Council some move will be made in the right direction. Something must be done, for justice is absolutely denied to parties living in the interior. The costs of trying an action are so great (if in Sydney, from witnesses' expenses, if on Circuit from counsel's fees and witnesses' expenses) that unless a party has sustained a very grievous injury, he is not justified in going into the Supreme Court. If the Irish system be adopted justice will be brought to the door of every man, and I am bold to say that out of the materials of the Supreme Court, the Courts of Quarter Sessions, and the Court of Requests, a machine may be constructed which will give to the colony the advantages of the Supreme Court, and the Irish system, without any additional expense; nay, more, I think I can demonstrate that such new system would be self-supporting, as the County Courts in England are, besides effecting an incalculable saving in the personal expenses of suitors and witnesses.

I trust the subject will be taken up by some one more competent than I am; but if not, and that you think the matter worthy of further notice by me, I will offer some evidence in support of my statements.

Your obedient servant,

October 2. ATTORNEY.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—There are men in this world, and I fear many too, who look upon a horse as an animal formed merely for labour, in short as a drudge to toil under loads of sugar or wool, flour or tallow, as our necessities require, and even imagine that when harnessed in the most superb carriage ever built, he is but an inferior unit, instead of being, as he undoubtedly is, the most noble part of the whole turn out, aye, often including the two legged brutes he draws; but such however is not my opinion. I am one of his most ardent admirers; I love his docility; I love his fire; I love his beauteous eye. And what would not many a noble girl give for such an eye! His arched neck, his form of symmetry, the sloping quarters made for speed, the silky skin without sport or blemish. All, all to me are objects of love; and I heartily coincide in the reverence the ancients held him in when Kings alone were allowed to ride and heroes to hurl the javelin from chariots drawn by this most perfect of created things.

Think then, Gentlemen, how disgusted I must be to see stud after stud, which have taken thousands of pounds to form, and anxious years to create, one after another to the auction mart, and dispersed the deuce knows where, amongst carriers, draymen, and snobs called gents, no thought of pedigree, no idea of blood, no wish to continue that selection which alone can produce a first-rate animal; enough for them as I said before if he can draw a load of stuff to the diggings, or an hundred hides to a filthy tannery. Blest shades of Eclipse, Priam, and Merlin, to what degradation is your generation reduced.

However, hang the diggings and the tannery. Let me ask, can nothing be saved out of the general wreck for the future benefit of the colony? Gratis is dead, and so are Toss, Cap-à-Pie, Theorem, Whisker, &c. Camel is old, so is Dover, and many others. And when they die, where are we to look for their successors? No person now, unless soliciting suffrages for a seat in Tarban Creek, will hazard £1000 to import even an Euclid.

Then where, I repeat, are their successors to come from? alas, echo answers, where!

But we still have some of the old stock remaining—rare ones too; and the object of my letter is to endeavour to retain their blood unadulterated with the filth we see many breeding from; and to do so, let us suppose, as is their bounden duty, that Government establish a breeding stud. Do not, indulgent reader, be alarmed, it will not cost a million of gold, a few nuggets will suffice; well—see—a station, two assistants, fifty picked thorough-bred mares of the purest and most undoubted blood, three stallions, and lo! the plot stands revealed. Thus we can preserve, for a time at least, the blood that enterprise freighted over 16,000 miles of storms and calms, of sunshine and of showers. In truth it is the duty of the Government seriously to consider this matter. We already ask ourselves where a good horse is to be found, and in a few years more we will be compelled to reply,—no where, "Gone, gone, they are all gone."

The East India Company, bless the old fogies for it, are giving up their studs, and where can they to be supplied from but from Australia?

The gold fields will throw the whole world open to us: we are destined to shake hands with the East, and hug the West; the North will offer us a kiss: and the South has her islands with whom we will rub noses. Let us then, before it is too late, not only endeavour to preserve the rank our nags have already obtained in Eastern lands, but year after year add to their value by increased attention to breeding, which alone can be acquired by the most diligent attention to the propagation of the pure blood, untainted, which fortunately yet belongs to us.

Stud after stud have been dispersed; of these, some mares are yet to be purchased; from existing studs others can be procured, stud from the Belford stud, now in the market, (the more the pity), in which there is an abundance of the purest blood in the colony, a few more so; that there is no great difficulty at present in accomplishing the object I propose, but let a year or two glide away and vanish as a vapour, then we shall have bitterly to lament our folly.

OLD JORROCKS.

TO T. CALLAGHAN, ESQ.

(Per favour of the Sydney Morning Herald.)

SIR,—In reference to the paragraph in my letter published in the Sydney Herald of the 3rd instant, in which allusion is made by me "to the continual exercise of your right of reply in your character of public prosecutor, both when prisoners call witnesses, and when they do not even speak in their own defence;" and being convinced that in the latter instance I have fallen into a mistake, I take the earliest opportunity of acknowledging the error I have committed in that respect. I am, dear Sir, yours, very obediently,

PIERSON THOMPSON.

ENGLISH EXTRACTS.

THE NEW ZEALAND COMPANY.

(From the Times, May 23.)

THE relations of Government to the New Zealand Company are especially worthy of attention at the present moment, not only on account of their own intrinsic importance, but of the warning they afford of the folly and impolicy of mixing up the duties of the Executive with the concerns of any trading company whatever. In spite of reason and experience, Ministers have determined to create, under the patronage and surveillance of the Executive, a vast company, to whose hands is to be intrusted the monopoly of the water supply for the city of London. With the directors of such a company the Government must necessarily be either at peace or war. If a good understanding prevail between them, it will be because the interests of the public have been sacrificed by Government to their demands. If Government resist those demands, the company will naturally throw itself into the arms of the Opposition, and that Opposition, as soon as it obtains power, will be pledged to concede to its most unreasonable demands. Thus, sooner or later, the triumph of the company over the public, and the sacrifice of the interests of the many to the few, are secured.—Everybody knows that the New Zealand Company commenced colonizing operations about twelve years ago, not only without the consent, but against the will of the Home Government. They took possession of large tracts of land purchased from the natives, and were soon involved in all the complexities, as to the rights of the vendors and of the Crown, which such a title necessarily involves. Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that war should break out between them and the then Secretary of State for the Colonies, Lord Stanley, and that the Parliamentary interest of the Company should be brought to bear upon the refractory head of the Colonial Office. Upon the merits of this quarrel we do not propose to offer any opinion; we have only to remark that the Company being opposed to Lord Stanley, Lord Grey, then in opposition, found in it a useful ally, and warmly espoused its cause. When Lord Grey succeeded to office, he was bound, of course, to distribute a fair portion of the spoils to his allies, and he lost no time in making a most candid admission of the faults of his predecessor, and of the right of the Company to be indemnified for the injuries which they had received at his hands. The result was a loan to the Company out of the consolidated fund of no less a sum than two hundred and thirty-six thousand pounds of the money of the taxpayers of this country, and an agreement as to further advantages contained in an act (10 and 11 Victoria, cap. 112) entitled, with a modesty which by no means does justice to its contents, "An Act to Promote Colonization in New Zealand, and to authorize a loan to the New Zealand Company." By the 7th section of this act Lord Grey was empowered to nominate a commissioner, at a salary of £1500 a year, who was to be present at all the meetings of the board, and to have a veto on all their proceedings. The 19th section of this act declares that if the company shall, within three months after the 5th of April, 1850, give notice they are ready to surrender their charters, to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that lands held by the company shall revert to the Crown, the Crown undertaking to satisfy the liabilities of the company to its settlers at Nelson, and any other liabilities incurred by the company, with consent of the Commissioner, releasing to the company the sum of two hundred and thirty-six thousand pounds of our money, which they had borrowed, and giving to the company a mortgage, with interest at three-and-a-half per cent, over the whole of the islands of New Zealand for two hundred and sixty-eight thousand pounds more, making the grand total of money to be received by the New Zealand Company from the public purse five hundred and four thousand pounds—a sum enormously exceeding the value of the fee-simple of the country which they were to colonize. The company had considerable trouble with their land claimants at Nelson between the period of the passing of this act and their final dissolution in 1850. The Commissioner was speedily got rid of, and his place supplied, at a much lower salary, by a gentleman from the Colonial Office. The Government being bound, in case of the dissolution of the company, to satisfy the outstanding claims of the settlers, which were understood to amount to a very large sum, was, of course, no longer an impartial arbiter between the company and its claimants, and found it expedient to take the office of commissioner into its own hands. How these claims are settled, whether they are settled at all, and, if so, out of what fund and by what means, nobody knows. All we know is, that if they be not settled by the company, the British Exchequer is liable to pay them without any power of recovering them back from the company, in addition to the two hundred and thirty-six thousand pounds which we have already paid them in hard cash, and the two hundred and sixty-eight thousand pounds for which we are to give them a mortgage over the Crown lands of New Zealand, paying them interest in the mean time at the rate of three and-a-half per cent. At length, the fatal 5th of April, 1850, arrived, and the inevitable result, which must have been foreseen at the passing of the act in 1847, arrived with it. The New Zealand Company had a choice between continuing a most unprofitable colonizing speculation, subject to a debt of two hundred and thirty-six thousand pounds due to the British Government, and to satisfy the claims of its Nelson settlers, or it might, by a simple notice of its intention to surrender its charter, wipe out the debt of two hundred and thirty-six thousand pounds, transfer the liability to the Nelson settlers from its own shoulders to those of Sir Charles Wood, and receive in exchange for these enormous concessions a mortgage on New Zealand, not merely that part embraced in its charter, but the whole of the northern and southern islands, for two hundred and sixty-eight thousand pounds more. The result was not left in doubt; no, not for a moment. The company dissolved itself, bearing with it into thin air a quarter of a million of our money, and the land fund of New Zealand for a generation or two, and leaving us nothing to console us for its loss but the privilege of paying its debts to its Nelson settlers. Such are the results of an alliance between the Government and a trading company possessing a strong Parliamentary interest. We undertook to guarantee the New Zealand Company's colonising operations, just as we are about to undertake to secure to the proprietors of the water monopoly a dividend of five per cent. The first engagement has cost the country half a million, and the metropolitan consumer of water is not likely to escape so cheaply. We cannot dismiss the case of the New Zealand Company without expressing surprise at the extraordinary apathy with which the guardians of the public purse have sanctioned and witnessed this comfortable transfer of a quarter of a million of money from the pocket of the nation to that of a trading company which it has thus bribed into suicide. Is there no member of Her Majesty's Opposition who thinks it worth his while to inquire into the circumstances which attended, and the transactions which have succeeded this extraordinary compact, in which the advantage seems to have been wholly one sided? We should gladly know in what manner the claims of the Nelson settlers have been satisfied, and to what amount we may still be liable on that account. We should like to know what were the circumstances which led to the dismissal of the Parliamentary Commissioner, and what offence those parts of the island of New Zealand have committed which, without having been the scene of the operations of the company, have had their land fund confiscated by act of Parliament for its benefit. The company may have succeeded in extricating itself from ruin, but it has bequeathed a disastrous legacy to the island of New Zealand, the proceeds of whose waste lands for many years to come are to be applied to their use, instead of being employed in local improvement, or in paying the passage of emigrants. The injury thus done to the colony is incalculable, and ought, if it be yet possible, to be averted. There is something so suspicious in all these proceedings, they have so much more the appearance of dictation by the company of its own terms to the Government than of a fair and equal contract, that we cannot help believing that if the correspondence of the Commissioner with the Government, and of the Company and Government after his dismissal, were before the public, they would think it more just that the Company should pay its own debts to the settlers and the public, than that, after we have taken upon ourselves the one and remitted the other, we should be called upon to mortgage the domain of the Crown to secure to persons thus benefitted at our expense an additional quarter of a million from the funds of a distant and helpless colony. The Act for the colonization of New Zealand, and a loan to the New Zealand Company, should have been entitled "An Act to prevent New Zealand from being colonised, and for a gift to the New Zealand Company."

CHAUCER AND THE EXHIBITION.—Chaucer, it would seem, possessed a prophetic faculty in his prefiguration of this Palace of Glass. The passages we quote occur in the "House of Fame," in the introduction to which the poet describes it as a vision, and speculates upon the causes of dreams, affirming his inability to decide whether

"Spirits have the might
To make folks dream o' night,
Or if the soul of proper kind
Be so perfect as men find
That it wote what is to come."

"As I slept," he goes on to say,
"I dreamt I was
Within a temple made of glass
In which there were more images,
Of gold standing in sundry stages,
In more rich tabernacles
And with jewels more pinnacles,
And more curious portraitures,
And quaint manner of figures
Of gold work than I saw ever."
* * * *

"Then saw I stand on either side
Straight down to the doors wide
From the dais many a pillar
Of metal that shone out full clear."
* * * *

"Then gan I look about and see
That there came entering in the hall,
A right great company withal,
And that of sundry regions
Of all kinds of conditions
That dwell in earth beneath the moon,
Poor and rich."
* * * *

Such a great congregation
Of folks as I saw roam about,
Some within and some without,
Was never seen nor shall be no more!"

So palpable a coincidence is, to say the least of it, very curious.—Liverpool Mercury.

A few days ago a sailor speaking in London against the new Mercantile Marine Act, spun a tolerably long yarn to sustain the honour of his craft. He complained of the power the measure gave the captains; and spoke bitterly of the character of the skippers of the day. "Why," said he, "not long ago, on the coast of Afriker, a cap'n was going to throw one o' the crew that was dying, overboard, before he was dead. So the man says, 'You ain't a going to bury me alive, are you?' 'Oh,' says the captain; 'you need'nt be so jolly particular to a few minutes.'"

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE UNITED COUNTIES OF PHILIP, BRISBANE, AND BLIGH.

GENTLEMEN,—For the distinguished honour you have conferred upon me in electing me a member of the Legislative Council for the united counties of Philip, Brisbane, and Bligh, I beg you will accept my warmest thanks. It is, I assure you, doubly acceptable to me, from the fact of my being personally a stranger to you, and that therefore your voluntarily appointing me to the responsible office of your representative can only be regarded by me as a token of your marked approbation of my conduct in reference to the transportation question, the only matter of especial public importance in which I have hitherto taken a conspicuous part.

It was in the highest degree gratifying to me to have been selected by my fellow-colonists as the medium of transmitting to her most gracious Majesty the Queen, the Resolutions and petitions containing their sentiments and wishes upon a question of such vital importance to the character and interests of the colonists. And, notwithstanding the calumnies with which our measures were so unjustly assailed, I fearlessly assert that the conduct of those who co-operated with me on the occasion to which I refer, was more consistent with genuine loyalty to our beloved Sovereign, and honest attachment to the British constitution, than that of opponents, who were willing, from a supposed regard to their pecuniary interests, to sacrifice the high moral character by which that constitution has ever been guarded by Englishmen.

Nor do I feel less gratification when I consider the proud position in which, owing to recent circumstances, the Anti-Transportation party is placed. Of the most powerful and influential of our strenuous opponents, none now remain to maintain the cause they so obstinately defended. All have changed their sentiments have pledged themselves never to endanger the best interests of the colony by supporting the revival of transportation to our shores. Upon whatever grounds they may urge to justify this entire change of views, it is sufficient for us to be assured that they have changed; and that unless they had unequivocally proclaimed their conversion to the opinions we entertained, they would never have been re-elected to their seats in the Legislature.

I shall feel it to be my duty to visit you at the earliest convenient opportunity, in order that I may become more intimately acquainted with your local wants. In the meantime I shall esteem it a favour if you will freely confer with me upon all matters which may require immediate attention—and I pledge myself that I will to the best of my ability discharge the important trust which you have confided to me.

I have the honour to remain,
Gentlemen,
Your faithful, obedient servant,
ROBERT CAMPBELL.

A coppered and copper-fastened, substantially built vessel of 40 tons register—engaged in the Southern Coasting Trade.
The Auctioneer feels himself justified in bringing this vessel particularly under the notice of parties engaged in the Coasting Trade, being a beautiful model, fast sailer, carrying a large cargo with light draught of water; built by Corcoran, well found, and in every respect the kind of craft out of which a careful owner can reap a comfortable independence with small outlay and trouble.

The vessel when left by the captain and crew was firmly fixed between two rocks, on the north end of the island—dry at low water, and might be easily repaired and floated off at spring tides. The foremast is gone by the board; the mainmast, bowsprit, and jib-boom, left standing, with the gear attached. With the hull, there are—one new jib (on shore); 2 anchors, 9 and 7 cwt., 50 fathoms of chain to the small and 90 fathoms to the bower; 1 kedge; together with the greater part of the running gear, and rigging, sails, &c., &c.
The late master, Mr. Cobban, would be happy to afford any further information to intending purchasers, and is willing to enter into an engagement with the purchaser for getting her off.
The Beaver was built by Mr. Chowne, in 1849, at a cost exceeding £1400; was coppered and copper fastened, and has lately undergone a thorough overhaul and refit.

Her timbers are all iron-bark, picked with great care; and below water mark are as closely joined as could possibly be done—thereby giving her great strength for carrying cargo.

The cargo of the Ariadne, from Valparaiso, consisting of—2694 Bags fine flour, 100 lbs. each
87 Bags walnuts
1 Package Panama hats.
☞ The advices by this vessel confirm the rumours, which have for some time past been current in Sydney, relative to the high rates demanded for flour in South America; the price now ruling at Valparaiso being equal to £20 per ton (as can be shown by private advices now in town). And when the demand for this colony becomes known, there can be no doubt but quotations would be much higher and preclude the possibility of any of the orders being fulfilled which have gone up from this during the past few months.
N.B.—The flour will be sold in lots to suit the convenience of purchasers. Remember the bags are all 100 lbs. each, and therefore most covenient for the diggings.
